

Review of the Didactic Unit

There is nothing like the Planet Earth

The Didactic Unit "There is nothing like the Planet Earth" seeks the knowledge of a vocal musical piece that combines the recognition of the greatness of our planet, along with the importance of the feelings of those who inhabit it. The analysis of the song Planet Earth, composed and performed by the Morgan group, includes the knowledge of basic musical parameters intended to accentuate the expressiveness of the piece. Likewise, references to elements included in the song are added, which are related to the adventure of those who traveled from Earth "in peace for all humanity".

This unit allows students to recreate their own version of the music studied. They will raise the choice of the name of their group, the style they prefer and the importance or significance of the language chosen for it. It will be the beginning of their learning, through desktop publishing, as independent music promoters. In this way they will carry out a promotional campaign for the music market. In it, they will be able to combine the expression of their own musicality, by choosing a style close to their taste, and their organizational skills, through the design and edition of the presentation of their group to their public.
